4 MOTHERS, 10 CHILDREN.

These children are being brought up on Castoria. Read what the mothers say about Castoria. There is no opium, morphine or other narcotic substance in Castoria. The formula is printed on the wrapper of every bottle. It is perfectly harmless, pleasant to take and positively effective. Physicians prescribe Castoria, mothers give Castoria, and Children cry for Castoria. It gives the child health and the mother rest.

"I certify that little Robbie Hale, of 191 Portland Avenue, St. Paul, was a thin, crying baby from his birth until he was given Castoria. He began to improve from the first week's trial. Has taken 13 bottles; is perfectly well; weighed 30 pounds the day he was 7 months old, and when this picture was taken. Robbie's changed condition has caused many mothers to use Castoria. It is the best thing for babies I have ever known."
FANNIE MULLIN, Professional Nurse.
466 Portland Ave.,
St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 4, 1887.

"This is a picture of my twins, Charlie and William. It was taken when they were 5 months old. They weigh 16 pounds each. I am indebted to Castoria for their uniform good health."
MRS. HERMINE SCHULZE.
1629 Lexington Ave.,
New York, May 23rd, 1887.

"I enclose you photographs of my 'triplets' 2 boys and 1 girl—Maggie, Pete and Willie. I owe their health and strength to Castoria. It was through my neighbors' urgent appeals that I commenced its use, as both my boys were thin and inclined to be sickly. At present they are fat and hearty, they weigh 8, 8½ and 9 pounds, and are 2 months and 3 days old."
MRS. MARY KLINGER.
790 Cortland Ave.,
New York, May 23rd, 1887.

"I enclose you photograph of my quartette, 4 girls. They are now 2 weeks old. The smallest weighs 5 pounds, the others 8 pounds each. My other children have all gained health and strength from the use of Castoria, and I have already commenced giving it to my four little darlings."

NEW WESTMINSTER.

The Fruit Growers' Exhibition a Grand Success.

NEW WESTMINSTER, Aug. 7.—The second annual exhibition of the British Columbia Fruit Grower's Association was opened in this city at 8 o'clock last evening by Lieut.-Governor Nelson. A large assemblage of people were present, including representatives from various outlying sections of the district. The exhibits consisted of fruits, vegetables and flowers. The display was very creditable, being a great improvement over that of last year. The Westminster artillery band was in attendance and enlivened the proceedings with choice selections and favorite airs.

TO-DAY'S DISPATCHES

LORD SALISBURY ON THE PEACE OF EUROPE.

A Baptist Minister Gambles and Gets the Worst of It—A Young German Shoots the Girl of His Choice and Then Ends His Own Career—Miscellaneous.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Aug. 7.—The stone barn of the Thomas Iron Company at Hokendaqua was burned early this morning. All the patterns accumulated by the company for the past thirty years were destroyed. Nine horses were burned to death. The fire is believed to be incendiary; loss $35,000.

Served Him Right.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—A special to the Sun from Wheeling, W. Va., says: Thos. D. Stewart, Baptist minister living about five miles from New Martinsville, was buncoed out of $3,000 yesterday by three confidence men. Two of the strangers made a bargain with Stewart for the latter's farm for $6,500 and Stewart started to town with them to secure the money. On the way a drunken third party inveigled Stewart and his new friends in a game of three card monte, and one of the latter won $500. Stewart was then induced to bite, but having no money he went to New Martinsville, drew $500 from the bank and got a note for $500, which was discounted, and went back and bet and won $2,000. With the $500 belonging to the stranger the money was then put into a box and Stewart was told to keep it for a day or two. Stewart went home, opened the box and found it full of newspaper clippings, but no money.

Unrequited Love.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The Herald's special from Winona, Minn., says: Early last spring Otto Wenzloff came here from Montana and engaged as a farm hand. The attraction calling him here was a comely cousin, Miss Hulda Wenzloff. He appeared, however, to be doomed to disappointment, for despite the most assiduous attention, Miss Hulda occasionally smiled upon other suitors. This exasperated young Otto and resulted in several quarrels with the girl's other admirers, and on Monday night Otto entered Miss Wenzloff's sleeping room and awakened her. He then again urged his suit, but was given a firm negative answer. He then told her he had intended killing her three weeks ago, but thought her time not yet come. With this threat he placed a revolver close to her left ear and fired. A sudden movement caused the ball to lodge in the tissues of the neck. He then placed the revolver against his own temple and fired, causing almost instant death. The girl may live. The young man a short time since sent tickets to his mother, sister and brother in Germany, and they are supposed to be on the Atlantic, bound for America.

Unchristian-Like Christians.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The Herald's Monticello, Ills., special says: David Johnson, ex-postmaster under Cleveland, at Illiopolis, and a prominent elder in the church, has been sued for $25,000. One suit is by Miss Ollie Gilbert, daughter of the former postmaster and merchant. She claims $10,000 for slander. Johnson's brother-in-law, A. P. Tarter, sues for $500 for alienating his wife's affections. R. T. Spencer, editor of the Illiopolis paper, sues for $10,000, claiming Johnson and others slandered him in an article published charging Spencer with wilful lying and slandering a Christian preacher at Illiopolis.

A Question of Color.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—A special to the Herald from St. Louis says: A negro named Scott has invaded the sanctity of one of the most fashionable flat houses of the west end, known as the West Pines. Here resided some of the most aristocratic citizens of St. Louis. He is a servant of Mrs. Catherine H. Springer, well known for her many charities. Scott was maintained on the basis of a friend of Mrs. Springer, rather than a servant, and it was to this that the other people objected. It is claimed Scott put on airs and that the ladies of the house, feeling their prestige jeopardized by the presence of a colored man on terms of apparent equality, entered an emphatic protest to his continued presence in the place. The manager of the house declares that Mrs. Springer has a right to employ whom she pleases, and so the matter stands.

Kemmler's Execution.

AUBURN, N. Y., Aug. 7.—The subject which continues to excite the greatest interest in connection with the Kemmler execution is the record of the voltage of the shock which killed him. It has been generally supposed that the first shock was 1,300 volts and the second between 1,500 and 2,000. Electrician Barnes, who was in the dynamo room, said to one of the physicians in attendance yesterday, that at no time was the voltage more than 1,100 and it fell frequently to 800. Dr. Daniels of Buffalo, who performed the delicate work of removing the brain and spinal cord of the dead man at the autopsy, has gone home, taking with him parts of the spinal cord and other specimens to experiment upon. It was Learned to-day for the first time that in the consultation of doctors on Tuesday night, Warden Durston made a proposition to hold the execution at nine o'clock that night, but it was determined by a vote of those present that it would be better to hold it in the day time.

A Creditable Piece of Work.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—An Evening Post editorial to-day says: The Evening Post will indulge the reasonable pride it feels over its account printed in yesterday's issue of the Kemmler execution at Auburn, N. Y. Careful perusal of its morning contemporaries fails to disclose to the impartial eyes of the Evening Post that with all the advantages of time and deliberation on their side, these journals were able to present a more complete and satisfactory account than was printed twelve hours earlier in their own columns. Placing credit where credit is due, the Evening Post received its report from Auburn complete and entire as it was printed from the United Press. It accepts with pride this piece of work for the Press Association, and the Evening Post has great pleasure in expressing its indebtedness to the United Press.

A Great Increase.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The census office has completed a rough count of the population of Chicago, which shows the population at 1,098,576, given an increase since 1880 of 595,891, or 11,832 per cent. This makes Chicago the second largest city in the United States.

An Elopement Stopped.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—A special to the Herald from Louisville says: Joseph Calvin, aged 20, has been employed as a laborer upon the farm of Amos Goodwin, near Jeffersonville, Ind. Goodwin is quite wealthy and has a daughter, Maggie, aged 17. She came home from school a couple of months ago and fell in love with Calvin. As the girl knew her father wouldn't consent to a wedding an elopement was planned. They fled this morning, the girl getting out of bed and escaping to where her lover was in waiting. Mr. Goodwin lives but a short distance from the Ohio River, and the two procured a skiff and rowed across to the Kentucky side. The girl's parents soon discovered her absence, and Mr. Goodwin set out in pursuit. Calvin and Maggie were found at Lagrande, Ky., where they had taken out a marriage license. Mr. Goodwin forbid the license being issued, and when the lovers started to get on the train to leave, he held the girl, while Calvin went on. She is still in Lagrande and refuses to come home.

Different Opinions.

CAPE MAY, Aug. 6.—The recent visit of Secretary Blaine to the President at Cape May was not altogether of a social nature. There was a prolonged conference on the seal fisheries question and on reciprocity. Blaine is reported on good authority as maintaining the doctrine that the claims of the government in regard to Behring Sea as a closed water like the Delaware or Chesapeake Bay cannot be successfully accomplished, and the President claims it is United States property, acquired by treaty and purchase, and must be held at all hazards. Secretary Blaine being the guest of the President did not press his views, but will await a future cabinet council on the subject. There were radical differences of opinion on the reciprocity question, and instead of Blaine being won over to the President, he was further from him than before the Cape May meeting. There seems to be small chance of concession enough on either side to formulate administrative policy.

Fatal Cholera.

MADRID, Aug. 7.—A fatal case of cholera is reported in this city.

CAIRO, Aug. 7.—Deaths from cholera at Jeddah average 100 daily.

College Burned Down.

MONTREAL, Aug. 7.—Word was received here this morning that Moffat College, on Isle Parrot, 10 miles from here is burned to the ground. Over 300 students are in attendance at the college, and they are now quartered in outbuildings and farmhouses. There was no loss of life.

Kemmler's Remains.

AUBURN, Aug. 7.—Warden Durston said to a United Press reporter this afternoon that the remains of Kemmler still lies in the room in the prison where autopsy was held. He had not decided where they were to be buried.

A Big Deficit.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—The report of the liquidators of the Panama Canal Company, which has been presented to the tribunal of the Seine, gives the total expenditures of the company so far as 131,350,000 francs. On March 3rd the assets were 16,000,000 francs.

Again Remanded.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Dr. McGoogal, Augustus D. Harrison, and Fanny D. Shaw, indicted for manslaughter in causing the death of Annie Goodwin by malpractice, were arraigned in court to-day and pleaded not guilty. They were remanded for trial. Mrs. Shaw's bail was increased from $1,000 to $3,000; Harrison's, from $5,000 to $7,500; McGoogal's bail remains at $20,000.

Riotous Prisoners.

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—A serious riot is in progress at the state prison at Charlestown. The police reserves of this city have been sent to Charlestown.

Must Register.

OTTAWA, Aug. 6.—The Minister of Marine has instructed all Canadian surveyors of shipping to register new vessels according to the provisions of the Merchants' Shipping Act, which passed the Imperial Parliament last year. Thus the registers of Canadian vessels will conform to the registration system in vogue on the other side of the Atlantic.

Affairs at Buenos Ayres.

BUENOS AYRES, Aug. 6.—4.20 p.m.—President Celman has been compelled by popular clamor to resign, and Vice-President Pellegrini has assumed the presidency. It is expected that Senors Metre, Costa, Gris-chago and Lavalle will enter the new cabinet. Public confidence is reviving and gold is quoted at 170. The chambers have not accepted Celman's resignation. Complications are feared and great excitement prevails.

Salisbury and Peace.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—At the Lord Mayor's banquet at Mansion House to-night Lord Salisbury spoke of the peaceful condition of Europe. During the six years that his government had been in power, he said, Europe had never presented so uninteresting an aspect from a war point of view. He alluded to the widespread tendency to settle disputes by compromise. Egypt was steadily progressing toward financial equilibrium, and the future of the country was a delicate diplomatic matter. The time had not come for Egypt to govern herself. The Anglo-German-African agreement proved that it is the desire of the leading powers to maintain amicable relations. The government of Ireland was entirely successful, and that country was most orderly and contented.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

INTERVIEWS WITH PROMINENT GENTLEMEN.

The Opinion at Nanaimo Unmistakably Against the Action of the Authorities—Everything Still Quiet and Peaceable—Latest Incidents.

WELLINGTON, Aug. 6, 9 p.m.—All quiet at the seat of war. The procession of this afternoon was apparently enjoyed by the participants, who, after cheering the soldiers quietly broke ranks and went to their homes—temporary ones under canvas, and rough shacks thrown together in a hurry.

The building of these rough homes still goes briskly forward. To-day a young man and his wife were noticed at work on one. The wife was on the roof helping to put on the planks to make it wind and water tight, and as both were working with a will, they will probably have a roof over their heads by to-morrow. Very little real excitement exists, all thought of violence being evidently too ridiculous to be entertained for a moment.

Your correspondent to-day visited several of the MEN WHO ARE AT WORK.

While not looking to be men of a class to be afraid, and who evidently would resent the imputation of cowardice, they were all unanimous in stating that they believed that the presence of the military was necessary to preserve peace. They said that it was not pleasant to go to work and hear the hoots and yells of an angry and unruly mob, and not know what moment they might be attacked; but as far as your correspondent can see there is no danger of any row. When the opinion is expressed that it seemed entirely unnecessary to have the troops, your correspondent is told, "you had ought to have been here Monday, and then you wouldn't say that. You would then see how much they were needed," and as the interviewer was not there on that day, why he can say nothing, but diligent inquiries made in other quarters fails to disclose any evidences of violence. All of the locked out miners are willing to admit that at one time on Monday one or two called out some rather indelicate language to the men who were at work, but there are dozens who aver that the ones using the language were checked at once and told that no disturbance would be allowed. Several of the leaders of the men deplore that some of their number so far forget themselves as to even yell, and all unite in saying it shall not occur again. It seems from what can be gathered by diligent enquiry that on Monday the men in procession left the public road and walked down on to the company's property near the shops. They were told to get off it, and at once obeyed, but one or two of the more choleric used some pretty stiff talk to the mine owners and officials. This, as near as can be gathered, is the whole row. Of course to have seen it and to hear about it are different, and I have yet to find, even among the the mine-owners' most ardent supporters, one who says that a blow has been struck or even a threatening attitude assumed.

AN INCIDENT.

Quite a little breeze of excitement occurred this afternoon over a discussion between the Messrs. Dunsmuir and a miner named Thos. Carter, one of the leaders in the union. Your correspondent had been told that Carter admitted to one of the special police that the miners did wrong in yelling and calling names, and Carter was asked about it. "Yes," he replied, "I did say so, and say it again. I would say so to the Dunsmuirs too." Both the Dunsmuir brothers were near at the time and your correspondent suggested that the above be repeated to them. Carter was willing, and in answer to a question from James Dunsmuir again, in a manlike way, asserted that one or two of the men had used the expressions objected to, but they had been checked. "Didn't a hundred of them yell like that?" asked James Dunsmuir. "No sir, they did not—only one or two," was the reply. "Yes, they did," said Dunsmuir. "I beg your pardon," replied Carter. "If they did I didn't hear it."

It will be observed by this that a scribe who writes reports on labor troubles has an unenviable job. Both sides say exactly opposite things. But the continuing conversation between the mine owner and miner will not be uninteresting. It was opened by one of the Dunsmuirs asking: "What are you men making the parades for?"

"Well, just to keep together" replied Carter.

Dunsmuir—"And not to intimidate those who might wish to go to work?"

Carter—"No, not in the slightest. We don't want to intimidate anyone. If your men wish to go to work they can walk down this road and no one will molest or even speak to them."

Dunsmuir—"But what is the object of these parades if it is not intimidation?"

Carter—"Well, it's not that any way."

Dunsmuir—"Well, what is it then? Why do you parade here with flags, singing and marching?"

"Will you allow me to answer that question" asked a miner named Suggett.

"Yes."

"Well then, it's none of your business why we parade."

"That's straight, if it is cheeky," replied James Dunsmuir, "but it isn't a reason."

"Well," continued Suggett, "I'll tell you why we parade. It is to show to the public that there are men locked out at these mines. We are willing to go to work but are not allowed."

"Not while you remain union men," replied Mr. Dunsmuir. "And what are you going to go when other men take the vacant places?"

"Time will tell," was the reply, "but while we are orderly and quiet and peaceful we can parade as much as we like on the public road, and no one can stop us."

Mr. Dunsmuir—"The lawyers will have to argue that point out."

"The discussion dropped here, and although a lockout was on, and bitter feelings prevailed, it was noticed that the words on both sides were not acrimonious or uttered in anything like a taunting manner.

THE TRUTH TRIUMPHANT.

This afternoon Alex. Dunsmuir told your correspondent that Tully Boyce had telegraphed to the San Francisco Federated Trades that if the evictions were carried out it would require the cooler heads of the union to stop serious trouble. Some doubts as to the correctness of this were expressed; but Mr. Dunsmuir averred that a copy of the dispatch in question had appeared in the San Francisco Examiner over Tully Boyce's name. One of the leaders of the union was present and he strongly asserted that Mr. Boyce had never sent such a dispatch. Your correspondent suggested that Mr. Boyce be seen in the matter, and a drive to town was made and Mr. Boyce hunted up. When spoken to about the case he distinctly denied the story, and offered to go at once to the telegraph and show the dispatches he did send. This was done, and among many others asking for aid from the mayors of different cities was the following to A. A. Bushnell, secretary of the Federated Trades:

"NANAIMO, July 18, 1890.

"To A. A. Bushnell, 597 Mission St. San Francisco.

"Court ordered Wellington miners evicted in three and ten days.

"TULLY BOYCE."

It will be seen by this that no such dispatch as the one appearing in the Examiner ever was sent by Tully Boyce. There was a purported dispatch published in that paper, no doubt, as Alex. Dunsmuir says, but it is now evident it did not eminate from Tully Boyce. Had the latter ever sent such a one as was credited to him it could and would be made the handle, or excuse for sending up the troops, as then it could be said that the leader was apprehensive of trouble. He is not, however, nor never has been. He is too confident of the good sense of his fellow members.

A COMPLAINT.

A former employee of the mines, Mr. H. Gemmel, to day said to your correspondent that he felt aggrieved over the fact that a report had been circulated by the press that he had left because intimidated by the demonstrations of the union men. He wished to say this was not so. He had never taken any part in the strike. His work was that of a fireman, and after the miners were locked out he still remained by the mines, seeing that things were safe. The other day, though, he was asked by the bosses to dig coal, and as the trouble was one between the miners and the bosses, he refused to dig the coal, when the miners would not. He had no trouble with the men, and was not a union man, but he did what he thought was right as man to man, and left. He had not been intimidated, however, and did not think any one else had. He would like his position explained, however.

THE SOLDIERY.

The troops are quartered in the two cars at the station. During the day parties of ten take turn about for a ramble, after their time is up come back to camp again. They are happy and contented enough with plenty of good grub at the Wellington Hotel, but terribly tired over the uneventful aspect of affairs. No doubt it is tedious, as strict discipline is preserved. The men are anxious to get newspapers and books, and if their stay is much longer extended contributions of literature would be very acceptable. They are as a body and more especially the B.C. B.G.A. contingent, heartily sick of the whole business, and look forward eagerly for the order to return to Victoria. Their task is not a pleasant one, to say the least, although to their credit be it said, no complaints are made.

WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT IT.

S. M. Robins, of the V. C. Co., and Mr. Bryden Interviewed.

WELLINGTON via Nanaimo, Aug. 7.—Your correspondent had an interview with Mr. S. M. Robins, manager of the New Vancouver Coal Company this morning. Mr. Robins was asked what, in his opinion, had led to the present trouble. "That is a question," he replied, "that would be impertinent in me to answer, as the trouble is one concerning a neighbor and a business rival, and it would not do for me to make any comments on the causes of the trouble." "Could you tell me then, what attitude has been assumed by the miners' association pit officers when dealing with you," was asked. "Most certainly. I have found them to be in all cases friendly. The conduct of the men has been fair and reasonable in their dealings with us. I have found that their interviews tended towards improved relations between employers and employed."

"Concerning the committees against which the Messrs. Dunsmuir object so strongly, what is your opinion of them?"

"I must say that I consider the so-called grievance committee as more of an advocate between men and capital. Dealing with us I have found the committee to be composed of thinking and sensible men who have in no instance been intolerant or overbearing. In all cases were they only too ready to listen to reasonable explanations. In no instance to my knowledge have drastic measures been advocated and in the event of a dispute it has been conducted on the part of the men in a most business-like, calm and friendly manner. Regarding the [illegible] committee and its functions, as we have been exempted [illegible] have no cause to complain. [illegible] torial manner has been [illegible] regard them as a good [illegible]

CHAPTER III.

ALONE IN THE COLONEL'S PRESENCE.

The officers of Fort Warrener were assembled, as was the daily morning custom, in the presence of the colonel commanding. It had long been the practice of that veteran soldier to require all his commissioned subordinates to put in an appearance at his office immediately after the ceremony of guard mounting. He might have nothing to say to them, or he might have a good deal; and he was a man capable of saying a good deal in very few words and meaning exactly what he said. It was his custom to look up from his writing as each officer entered and respond to the respectful salutation tendered him with an equally punctilious "Good morning, Capt. Gregg," or "Good morning, Mr. Blake," never omitting the mention of the name, unless, as was sometimes tried, a squad of them came in together and made their obeisance as a body. In this event the colonel simply looked each man in the face, as though taking mental note of the individual constituents of the group, and contented himself with a "Good morning, gentlemen."

When in addition to six troops of his own regiment of cavalry, there were sent to the post, a major and four companies of infantry, some of the junior officers of the latter organization had suggested to their comrades of the yellow stripes that as the colonel had to roll call it might be a matter of no great risk to "cut the matinee" on some of the fiendishly cold mornings that soon set in; but the experiment was never designedly tried, thanks, possibly, to the frank exposition of his personal views as expressed by Lieut. Blake, of the cavalry, who said: "Try it if you are stagnating for want of a sensation, my genial plodder, but not if you value the service of one who has been there, so to speak. The chief will spot you quicker than he can a missing shoe—a missing horseshoe, Johnny, let me elaborate for your comprehension—and the next question will be, 'Mr. Bluestrap, did you intentionally absent yourself?' and then how will you get out of it?"

The matinees, so called, were by no means unpopular features of the daily routine. The officers were permitted to bring their pipes or cigars and take their after breakfast smoke in the big, roomy office of the commander, just as they were permitted to enjoy the post-prandial whiff when at evening recitation in the same office they sat around the room, chatting in low tones, for half an hour, while the colonel received the reports of his adjutant, the surgeon and the old and the new officer of the day. Then any matters affecting the discipline or instruction or general interests of the command were brought up; both sides of the question were presented, if question arose; the decision was rendered then and there, and the officers were dismissed for the day with the customary "That's all, gentlemen." They left the office well knowing that only in the event of some sudden emergency would they be called thither again or disturbed in their daily vocations until the same hour on the following morning. Meantime, they must be about their work—drills, if weather permitted; stable duty, no matter what the weather; garrison courts, boards of survey, the big general court that was perennially dispensing justice at the post, and the long list of minor but none the less exacting demands on the time and attention of the subalterns and company commanders.

The colonel was a strict, even severe, disciplinarian, but he was cool, deliberate, and just. He "worked" his officers, and thereby incurred the criticism of a few, but held the respect of all. He had been a splendid cavalry commander in the field of all others where his sterling qualities were sure to find responsive appreciation in his officers and men—or active and stirring campaigns against the Indians—and among his own regiment he knew that deep in their hearts the —th respected and believed in him, even when they growled at garrison exactions which seemed uncalled for. The infantry officers knew less of him as a sterling campaigner, and were not so well pleased with his discipline. It was all right for him to "rout out" every mother's son in the cavalry at reveille, because all the cavalry officers had to go to stables soon afterward—that was all they were fit for but what on earth was the use of getting them—the infantry—out of their warm beds before sunrise on a wintry morning and having no end of roll calls and such things through the day, "just to keep them busy?" The real objection—the main objection—to the colonel's system was that it kept a large number of officers, most of whom were educated gentlemen, hammering all day long at an endless routine of trivial duties, allowing actually no time in which they could read, study, or improve their minds; but as ill luck would have it, the three young gentleman who decided to present to the colonel this view of the case had been devoting what spare time they could find to a lively game of poker down at "the store," and their petition for "more time to themselves" brought down a reply from the oracular lips of the commander that became immortal on the frontier and made the petitioners nearly frantic.

For a week the trio was the butt of all the wits at Fort Warrener. And yet the entire commissioned force felt that they were being kept at the grindstone because of the frivolity of these youngsters, and they did not like it. All the same the cavalrymen stuck up for their colonel and the infantrymen respected him, and the matinees were business-like and profitable. They were rarely unpleasant in any feature, but this particular morning—two days after the arrival of Mrs. Rayner and her sister—there had been a scene of somewhat dramatic interest, and the groups of officers in breaking up and going away, could discuss nothing else. The colonel had requested one of their number to remain, as he wished to speak to him further, and that man was Lieut. Hayne.

Seven years had that young gentleman been a second lieutenant of the regiment of infantry, a detachment of which was now stationed at Warrener. Only this very winter had promotion come to him, and, of all companies in the regiment, he was gazetted to the first lieutenancy of Capt. Rayner's. For awhile the regiment when by itself could talk of little else. Mr. Hayne had spent three or four years in the exile of a little "two company post" far up in the mountains. Except the officers there stationed, none of his comrades had seen him during that time.

No one of them would like to admit that he would care to see him. And yet, when once in a while they got to talking among themselves about him, and the question was sometimes confidentially asked of comrades who came down on leave from that isolated station, "How is Hayne doing?" or "What is Hayne doing?" the language in which he was referred to, grew by degrees far less truculent and confident than it had been when he first went thither. Officers of other regiments rarely spoke to the "Riflers" of Mr. Hayne. Unlike one or two others of their arm of the service, this particular regiment of foot held the affairs of its officers as regimental property in which outsiders had no concern. If they had disagreements they were kept to themselves; and even in a case which in its day had attracted widespread attention the Riflers had long since learned to shun all talk outside. It was evident to other commands that the Hayne affair was a sore point and one on which they preffered silence. And yet it was getting to be whispered around that the Riflers were by no means so unanimous as they had been in their opinion of this very officer. They were becoming divided among themselves; and what complicated matters was the fact that those who felt their views undergoing a reconstruction were compelled to admit that just in proportion as the case of Mr. Hayne rose in their estimation, the reputation of another officer was bound to suffer, and that officer was Capt. Rayner.

Between these two men not a word had been exchanged for five years—not a single word since the day when, with ashen face and broken accents, but with stern purpose in every syllable, Lieut. Hayne, standing in the presence of nearly all the officers of his regiment, had hurled this prophecy in his adversary's teeth: "Though it take me years, I will live it down despite you; and you will wish to God you had bitten out your perjured tongue before you ever told the lie that wrecked me."

No wonder there was talk, and lots of it, in the "Riflers" and all through the garrison when Rayner's first lieutenant suddenly threw up his commission and retired to the mines he had located in Montana, and Hayne, the "senior second," was promoted to the vacancy. Speculation as to what would be the result was given a temporary rest by the news that war department orders had granted the subaltern six months' leave—the first he had sought in as many years. It was known that he had gone east; but hardly had he been away a fortnight when there came the trouble with the Cheyennes at the reservation—a leap for liberty by some fifty of the band, and an immediate rush of the cavalry in pursuit. There were some bloody atrocities, as there always are. All the troops in the department were ordered to be in readiness for instant service, while the officials eagerly watched the reports to see which way the desperate band would turn; and the next heard of Mr. Hayne was the news that he had thrown up his leave and had hurried out to join his company the moment the eastern papers told of the trouble. It was all practically settled by the time he reached the department; but the spirit and intent of his action could not be doubted. And now here he was at Warrener. That very morning during the matinee he had entered the office unannounced, walked up to the desk of the commander, and, while every voice but his in the room was stilled, he quietly spoke:

"Permit me to introduce myself, colonel—Mr. Hayne. I desire to relinquish my leave of absence and report for duty."

The colonel quickly arose and extended his hand:

"Mr. Hayne, I am especially glad to see you and to thank you here for all your care and kindness to our men. The doctor tells me that many of them would have had to suffer the loss of toes and ears, even of hands and feet in some cases, but for your attention. Maj. Stannard will add his thanks to mine when he returns. Take a seat sir, for the present. You are acquainted with the officers of your own regiment, doubtless. Mr. Billings, introduce Mr. Hayne to ours."

Without the adjutant promptly greeted the newcomer, presented a small party of yellow strapped shoulders, and then drew him into earnest talk about the adventure of the train. It was noticed that Mr. Hayne neither by word nor glance gave the slightest recognition of the presence of the officers of his own regiment, and that they as studiously avoided him. One or two of their number had indeed risen and stepped forward, as though to offer him the civil greeting due to one of their own cloth; but it was with evident doubt of the result. They reddened when he met their tentative—which was that of a gentleman—with a cold look of utter repudiation. He did not choose to see them, and, of course, that ended it.

Nor was his greeting hearty among the cavalrymen. There were only a few present, as most of the —th were still out in the field and marching slowly homeward. The introductions were courteous and formal, there was even constraint among two or three, but there was civility and an evident desire to refer to his services in behalf of their men. All such attempts, however, Mr. Hayne waved aside by an immediate change of the subject. It was plain that to them, too, he had the manner of a man who was at odds with the world and desired to make no friends.

The colonel quickly noted the general silence and constraint, and moved to shorten it as much as possible. Dropping his pen, he wheeled around in his chair with determined cheerfulness:

"Mr. Hayne, you will need a day or two to look about and select quarters and get ready for work, I presume."

"Thank you, colonel. No, sir. I shall move in this afternoon and be on duty to-morrow morning," was the calm reply.

There was an awkward pause for a moment. The officers looked blankly from one to another, and then began craning their necks to search for the post quartermaster, who sat an absorbed listener. Then the colonel spoke again:

"I appreciate your promptness, Mr. Hayne, but have you considered that in choosing quarters according to your rank you will necessarily move somebody out? We are crowded now, and many of your juniors are married, and the ladies will want time to pack."

An anxious silence again. Capt. Rayner was gazing at his boot toes and trying to appear utterly indifferent; others leaned forward, as though eager to hear the answer. A faint smile crossed Mr. Hayne's features; he seemed rather to enjoy the situation:

"I have considered, colonel. I shall turn nobody out, and nobody need be incommoded in the least."

"Oh! then you will share quarters with some of the bachelors?" asked the colonel, with evident relief.

"No, sir;" and the answer was stern in tone, though perfectly respectful; "I shall live as I have lived for years—utterly alone."

One could have heard a pin drop in the office—even on the matted floor. The colonel half arose:

"Why, Mr. Hayne, there is not a vacant set of quarters in the garrison. You will have to move some one out if you decide to live alone."

"There may be no quarters in the post, sir, but, if you will permit me, I can live near my company and yet in officers quarters."

"How so, sir?"

"In the house out there on the edge of the garrison, facing the prairie. It is within stone's throw of the barracks of Company B, and is exactly like those built for the officers in here along the parade."

"Why, Mr. Hayne, no officers ever lived there. It is utterly out of the way and isolated. I believe it was built for the sutler years ago, but was bought in by the government afterwards. Who lives there now, Mr. Quartermaster?"

Heavy Floods in Australia—Sensation in a Honolulu Court.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 3.—The steamer Zealander arrived from Sydney and Honolulu to-day, bringing the following advices:

The threatened strike of wharf laborers at Sydney has been avoided. The men, who numbered 1500, were granted their demands.

The rowing of O'Connor, the Canadian champion, [illegible] by Stansbury, has excited general disappointment, and he is considered not at all formidable. No arrangements have yet been made for a match between Kemp and O'Connor.

Big floods are reported in Western Australia, and the crops are destroyed. There has been a great rainfall in Sydney. In three days the fall amounted to seven inches. Considerable damage was done in the city and neighboring country.

The imperial postmaster general will consider the request to support the continuence of the New Zealand and San Francisco mail service.

Thirty men have deserted from the United States cruiser Charleston since her arrival at Honolulu.

Heavy rains on the island of Hawaii have done considerable damage. Many plantations are flooded. The steamer Farrallon has arrived at Honolulu from San Diego with passengers and a full cargo of general merchandise. This is the first vessel of the new line between the two places.

MATCHED PENNIES FOR HER.

Some Facts in the Dunlo-Bilton Divorce Scandal.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Without a doubt the topic which interested all London last week most of all was the attempt of the addle-headed Lord Dunlo to free himself from his "mesalliance" with the concert-hall singer Belle Bilton. The principal journals of England have been filled with the nauseating details which can only interest people on this side of the water as showing by the testimony of Dunlo and the witnesses called in his behalf how sprigs of nobility, brought up in idleness and with nothing but a title to carry them through life, contrive to carry on intrigues with women of the town. It was just such a set that Sherman Martin fell into and which proved his ruin.

At present public sympathy runs strongly with the concert-hall singer, who is and will be Lady Dunlo. Everything indicated that Lord Dunlo would lose his suit for divorce hence the compromise effected last Saturday. The testimony taken so far shows beyond doubt that Belle Bilton was formerly a woman of the town, with two children. Before Dunlo met her she was earning $7000 yearly by singing in concert halls.

She was wooed, or rather won, in a very peculiar manner. Dunlo and a young friend named Lord Albert Osborne, who is now in Ceylon, tossed or matched pennies to see who should live with Belle Bilton. She was ready for anything with a title. Dunlo won the toss.

His father allowed him very little pocket-money, so he lived on Belle's earnings, and she paid board bills for both at the Victoria Hotel. The testimony goes to show that she paid them with money obtained from Wertheimer, her former lover, who figured as co-respondent in the case.

Wertheimer is a New Yorker by birth. His father was in the clothing business in New York before he set up as a bric-a-brac dealer in Bond street, six years ago. Young Wertheimer went to New York and spent four years there. About his intimacy with Belle Bilton before her marriage there is no dispute. All the testimony taken so far, to prove that he has been intimate with the woman since she married Lord Dunlo, is purely inferential. A great number of witnesses were called to prove the intimacy was possible, but none show that it actually existed.

For the present general opinion is strongly in favor of the woman. His father, the Earl of Clancarty, openly admitted in the witness-stand that Dunlo was sent away with the design of permitting his wife to fall into a trap and to have the divorce settled before his return. In fact Dunlo was a mere puppet in the hands of his father, who, having kept his fast son beggarly in pocket money, wished to avoid paying his debts.

Mr. Sala, High and Mighty.

One of London's rather circumscribed literary circles, that revolving around the hub of the Society of Authors, is talking a good deal about the conduct of George Augustus Sala at the society's annual banquet the other night. He was to propose the toast of the Guests, and had expected to deliver the principal speech of the evening, but after he got into the dining hall with his wife he discovered that his seats were not in as prominent a place as he thought they ought to be, and indignantly marched out again. He is almost the last survivor now of the school of London hack writers, who learned their manners from Dickens, and people are in the habit of deferring a good deal to him on that account, but this affront will not be easily forgotten.

Ignatius Donnelly is nothing if not versatile. The author of the "Lost Atlantis" and the discoverer or the Baconian cryptogram has been recently defeated as a candidate for the governorship of Minnesota. But he is now on hand with a project to beat thunderstorms and tornadoes by means of balloons which are to be connected to earth by means of copper wires.

There will go into force in the State of New York in September a law designed to do away with the juvenile smoking habit. It reads: "No child actually or apparently under the age of 16 years shall smoke or in any way use a cigar or tobacco in any form whatsoever in any public street, place or resort." There may be difference of opinion as to whether this is the best means of dealing with an admitted evil. It is drastic enough as far as the "child's" public transgressions are concerned, but whether his performances with the weed in secret will not be accelerated thereby is a question. Some people believe the most effectual remedy for the tobacco habit among infants in public and private to be the parental switch.

Do Not Be Deceived.

"In Darkest Africa" is the title of Mr. Stanley's book. All others are bogus.

THE COLONIST AS AN APOLOGIST.

The Colonist, as we expected it would, endeavors to exculpate the Government of all responsibility in the matter of sending troops to Wellington. In this the Colonist is wasting its breath. The public are too familiar with the underground railway methods of the Government to swallow any statement it may make exonerating them of the folly and expense of sending troops to Wellington to bully peaceful citizens. Declarations and affidavits the Government may make relative to their powerlessness to prevent the calling out of troops, but the public will be chary of believing that three simple DOGBERRYS assumed the responsibility of ordering the invasion of Wellington. There was consultation without doubt, and there was concurrence on the part of the Government or the troops would not have been sent. Had the Government protested against the declaration of war against the miners the magistrates would scarcely have assumed the responsibility of making the most of their prerogative. But how is it that the requisition did not emanate from magistrates whose place of residence is at the seat of war? Who but the magistrates whose jurisdiction appertains to the locality of the sedition are properly qualified to issue a requisition for troops? Why does not the Government make a clean breast of the matter? Why does not the Government admit that in their opinion a riot was imminent at Wellington and that prudence required the presence of troops on the scene? An error in judgment with respect to the probability of a riot may be excused. Better men than the Government might err in their estimate of the temper of the Wellington miners, and especially with the recollection fresh in their minds of having duped them in the matter of Mr. HASLAM'S amendment to the Coal Mines Regulation Act. We opine that it was the coward conscience of the Government which inspired them to consent or to connive or to remain passive respecting the action of the Victoria magistrates in sending troops to Wellington.

The editor of the Nanaimo Free Press, who being on the ground ought to be a good judge of the temper of the strikers and of the probability of a disturbance which would justify an appeal for protection to an armed contingent, thus denounces the outrage upon that community:

"One of the most unwarrantable and flagrant outrages ever committed on a peaceful and law abiding community was inflicted on Nanaimo district yesterday when detachments of the C Battery and British Columbia Garrison Artillery were sent to Wellington on the requisition of three justices of the peace of the city of Victoria, who, on their official oath, declared either that a 'riot, disturbance or other emergency occurs or is anticipated.' Such is the requisition necessary to evoke the services of the militia in aid of the civil power. Now, how can three justices of the peace at Victoria know, except from hearsay and ex parte hearsay at that, that a riot, disturbance or other emergency is anticipated" at Wellington. What right have the justices of peace at Victoria to say that an armed force shall be sent to an outside settlement. In Nanaimo district are about twenty justices of the peace, (anyone of whom is equally capable with either of the three Victoria justices) and two stipendiary magistrates. Surely the magistrates on the ground, knowing the circumstances and knowing the men, are the proper ones to say when an armed force is required. The Free Press can imagine the howl of indignation and defiance that would go forth from one end of Victoria to the other, if in the case of a recent disagreement between the employers and employes in the Albion Iron Works at Victoria, three justices of the peace of Nanaimo had signed a requisition calling on the 'C' Battery to shoulder arms and take possession of the works. The Nanaimo justices of the peace would be emphatically—and not with scriptural language—told to stay at home and mind their own business. And they would be right in doing so, even as the people of Nanaimo are [illegible]

equally of the opinion that the Victoria justices would have been better engaged in attending to their own business, and leaving that of Nanaimo alone. The sending of the militia to Wellington is a huge farce which cannot be resented in too strong terms. But aside from the insult to the district, and the consequent ill effects in unsettling present enterprises and deterring further investments there is the question who is going to pay for this summer picnic. The Victoria people had the pleasure of improvising the picnic, so let them have the pleasure of providing for the ex-

KEMMLER.

KEMMLER assisted by 2000 volts of electricity went over to the "silent majority" yesterday morning. His removal by the new fangled method was not a success. The details of the execution as they have been described are sickening. Paralysed the man was at the first shock so that probably he lost all feeling, but it seems that it was necessary to roast him to make sure that life was extinct. Of course the cry will go up throughout the country "I told you so," and KEMMLER to a certain extent will be martyrized. Nevertheless it had to be done. Public sentiment demanded that death by hanging should be dispensed with if another method could be found which promised facility, sureness and comparative comfort to the party to be "removed." The ease with which people fooling about electrical machines and heavily charged wires were killed promised the desired result, and the action of the Legislature of New York is too well known to require being repeated here. So far as the dispatches show, death by electricity will be abandoned. Allowing that death by this process is easier than hanging, it is far more cruel from the fact that the preliminaries leading up to the death dealing stroke are elaborate and painfully slow. Death by electricity as experienced by KEMMLER seems to be the refinement of cruelty. KEMMLER, however, has immortalized himself. Down to posterity his name will go as the first man to officially suffer death by electricity. He has now a place in history. Better men will have passed from remembrance when KEMMLER will be cited as a victim to scientific botchwork.

WILL IT REALLY HAPPEN?

A writer in the Arena predicts dark days for the United States during the coming century. He begins his prophecy by quoting public men to the effect that a social, political and financial crash is inevitable. In the strong—almost incendiary language of the western farmers, in the turbulent element in the cities, in the growing intensity of the feud between capital and labor, and in the corruptions in politics, he finds causes which unless they are removed must eventuate in a general explosion. He quotes Bishop SPALDING to the effect that "rich men must do their duty or perish," and Bishop POTTER as saying that "these plutocrats are the enemies of religion as they are of State." He next proceeds to deal with the question of periodicity in relation to natural physical convulsions and political revolutions. The coming cataclysm, he says, will surpass in magnitude and horror anything of which authentic history has preserved a record. Political troubles will begin with the next presidential election. The Republican party will be "hurled from power." A Democratic administration will succeed, but that too will be kicked out. A Labor party will then assume control. Still the contending elements will refuse to harmonize, and eventually a struggle will ensue which will be intensified by religious discord and "negrophobia."

Then will begin the seismic disturbances. The Atlantic coast will be convulsed to the extent of the destruction of Galvestou, New Orleans, Mobile, St. Augustine, Savannah and Charleston. The principal northern seaboard cities will suffer in various degrees, and all this will come about in less than 25 years. The convulsion will be brief, commencing about noon and not lasting above an hour.

Had the prophet left out the earthquake part of the business and have contented himself with predicting the destruction of the two great political parties in the States, we should be able to accept his inspired dictum with some degree of confidence. But he goes too far. He is as radical as the cranks who prophesied the destruction of Oakland California, last spring. The faith that could swallow predictions so portentous would move a mountain. It is not unlikely that the next quarter of a century will witness some extraordinary political changes on this continent. Yet a few years more, unless something transpires which shall serve to distract attention from fiscal and labor questions, there will be a clean sweep of existing political parties. Things cannot go on as they are. Disaffection among the farmer element, who are always conservative, is significant of abuses which, under a democratic form of government, must be remedied or end in an explosion. The farmer element having reached the conclusion that they are the victims of combines, of transportation companies, and of protected "infant industries," will scarcely consent to much longer remain passive, and to assure themselves of victory will invite the co-operation of labor. Then it will be that the two political parties, corrupt to the core, will be driven to the wall, and upon their ruins a new party will spring into existence. The revolution, for it will be nothing less, will be a peaceful one. Excitement will run high, but there will be no bloodshed. Without a standing army the plutocrats can do no less than bend before the storm. All this is not impossible. No prophetic insight is required to presage the revolt against a policy which places the great mass of the people at the mercy of interests which, however beneficial they have been as a means of rapidly developing the country, have degenerated into one of extortion, and indeed in some instances downright brigandage. As for a religious war, that is not deserving of serious consideration. Bigotry there is yet in plenty, and of ecclesiasticism there is more than enough; but the great mass of the people are tolerant of religious opinion. Hence a quarter of a century, with progress proportionately as rapid as has characterized the last, orthodoxy will either be permanently enthroned or dethroned. Understand us, we say orthodoxy. Religion there will always be; orthodoxy, however, being a purely human institution is subject to human vicissitudes. Science in the next twenty-five years will either completely unsettle all forms of religious belief or establish a basis for a universal religion. With reference to seismic disturbances the probability of these occurring is a toss up. They are as likely to happen as not. He, however, who undertakes to set the date of their occurrance is presumptuous. Let no one, therefore, feel any alarm in respect to convulsions of nature of the character predicted. What most concerns people is the venality of men who are entrusted with the affairs of State. Let them turn their attention to the purging of parties of this class of scoundrels. There is no danger in political revolutions so long as they turn on propositions involving the welfare of the body politic.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Says the Montreal Witness: Mr. CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW has the reputation of being one of the cleverest of men and one admirably adapted to the presidency, but the last report of his sayings gives him an aspect of simplicity. Mr. DEPEW is in England and is reported as saying that he has met no Englishman who did not regard it as impossible that so little a thing as the Behring sea difficulty would bring about war between the two great English people and who did not look with horror upon such a suggestion. Mr. DEPEW would apparently have his countrymen think that no matter how overbearing they are in Behring sea, Britain will never interfere. He does not seem to see the severe sarcasm which the expressions he finds in the mouths of all Englishmen contain, and that the only thing that can make the Behring sea outrages upon the British flag unimportant in the eyes of Englishmen is the certainty that when the American people have worked off their steam, they will quietly retire from their untenable position. In contrast with this ceaseless vaporing is the leonine dignity of the English. The courtesy of H. M. S. Espiegle in vacating the Esquimalt dry dock, which was built for the British navy, with a polite apres vous to an American Behring sea steamer is fine.

LORD SACKVILLE'S ESTATE.

An Amicable Arrangement Arrived at Between the Contestants.

In October, 1888, Lord Sackville died, leaving the greater part of his property to the ladies-in-waiting of the Queen. His relatives disputed the will and it was taken into law. The week before last, when the case was to come up before the Probate court, Sir H. James, Q. C., rose and said,—I am happy to inform your Lordship that the only proof which will be submitted to you in this case will be of an entirely formal character. At the same time, it is desirable that on the part of the executors of the late Lord Sackville—Sir Fleetwood J. Edwards and Mr. Gerard Coke Meynell—I should make a short statement of the circumstances under which that formal proof is about to be given. My Lord, the late Lord Sackville died on October 1, 1888. Shortly before his death, or on July fourteenth, in the same year he made the will which is about to be proved before you. It happened that not long before the making of that will the testator sustained a great bereavement in the loss of his wife. With those who were of him by blood his association had not for years been of a very intimate kind, and so, when selecting objects for the disposition of his testamentary bounty, his thoughts naturally turned to those with whom, or with the positions of whom his life had been associated. Lord Sackville had been in the immediate service of the Queen as a lord in waiting, and so, when disposing of his property, he selected as legatees four ladies who had also been in the immediate service of Her Majesty as maid of honor. Two other ladies also received substantial benefits under his will. So far as the executors are concerned they have one plain duty to perform—to see that the will representing the true or certain wishes of the testator should be carried into effect. At the same time they feel satisfaction that in an amicable spirit, and with a graceful courtesy the legatees have met the wishes of the next-of-kin, and have left in their hands all property associated in any way with the history and tradition of the Sackville family. An arrangement has, therefore, been agreed to, with the full approbation of the executors, between the legatees and the next-of-kin. In making the arrangement no conflict has been entered upon and there has been no success to one side or failure to the other. The details of that arrangement concerns only the parties to it, and not the public; and, therefore, with your lordship's sanction, I will content myself with simply giving formal proof of the will. The will was allowed to go to formal proof.

LIVERPOOL, B.C.

The Fraser River Terminus of the New Westminster Southern Railway,

Opposite the rapidly growing city of New Westminster, and having deep water frontage on Fraser River.

The New Westminster Southern Railway runs from Liverpool to Fairhaven, Wash., where it connects with the great Northern Pacific Railway system. The Railway Company has now under construction at Liverpool a wharf 700 feet in length, costing about $10,000, and they intend to immediately erect workshops, passenger and freight stations, etc. The road is already graded between Liverpool and Fairhaven, and it is expected that trains will be in operation between the two places by 30th August, 1890.

A portion of the town site will be on the market on and after 16th June instant, and lots will be sold at low prices for a short time, and purchasers will have the benefit of first prices.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

company has been assisting the strikers?" was asked. "Not a shadow of such a thing," was the answer. "I am glad to say that the officers of the association are too dignified to be bought by any such means. Of course, you, as everyone else, will understand that the stopping of the Wellington mines means more business for us, but we do not foster it, nor did the miners. A man may inherit his father's wealth when the latter dies, but no son should murder his father. I sincerely hope the difficulty will soon be settled. Just now the weather is good, but if the trouble continues fifty children and women, who, poor souls, have already suffered enough, will be in a still worse position. I trust both parties will soon meet on better footing. As to the right or wrong of sending the military I would prefer to say nothing, although perhaps the presence of armed men might have caused violence. Peaceful measures are always best."

Speaking of the causes of the strike of the mines, that gentleman said the whole trouble had originated over the refusal of the mine owners to recognize the miners' grievance committee. He reviewed the whole lockout, and said that the grievance committee were the bane of mines as members of the committee were in all cases arbitrary, and made trouble not only for owners but for the miners themselves. Speaking of the necessity of sending troops, he said it was necessary, as in his opinion had no deterrent been employed on the miners, trouble would have ensued.

James and Alex. Dunsmuir also say the same, as does Superintendent of Police Langley. I have seen a few of the men who are working also, who say that the yells and hooting of the mob inspired dread and fear. They were afraid of personal hurt, as it was reported that some of the locked out miners were armed. Have not yet run across any one who would like to go to work but who is afraid to.

It is believed the troops will be kept here until the locked out men's places are filled with others. Several leaders in the Miners' Union say that the Union acted too precipitately in not giving notice to the mine owners of the change desired in the hours of labor. It is believed by them that had longer notice been given the result would have been the same but that the action would have been more business-like.

THIS AFTERNOON

Rasure Says C Battery's Presence Desirable—Employers Still Firm.

WELLINGTON, Aug. 7.—Mr. Rasure finished speaking at 2:45 p. m. Closing remarks he said he considered C Battery's presence desirable in a way as it was for the miners own good. The meeting was then addressed by others in much the same tones as Rasure.

Have just had a talk with A. Dunsmuir who says the mine owners are willing at any time to meet a deputation of miners as miners but not as union men, to consult as to the suggestions for certain changes. He would consider any representations made by the men, but he emphatically objects to recognize the union.

DOGGED FIRMNESS.

Setting Down to the Struggle—The Cowboy Evangelist and Others Speak.

Special to the TIMES.

WELLINGTON, Aug. 7.—All quiet this morning. Everything seems settling down to dogged firmness on both sides.

The miners held a private meeting last night, addressed by Rasure, the cowboy evangelist, Foster, M. P. P., Tully Boyce and others. There was no incendiary talk, but good advice was given. The miners were asked to comfort themselves with dignity and quietness, and all promised to do so. Several more have joined the union section. The union is busy this morning serving out orders for stores to the evicted men. A parade will be made at three this afternoon.

WHAT A RESIDENT SAYS.

Our Regular Correspondent at Nanaimo on the Situation.

NANAIMO, Aug. 6.—Your correspondent received your telegram to proceed to Wellington and at 5 minutes after arrival of the noon train at this city, I managed to catch the train for that place. I found everything as quiet as a country village on a Sabbath morn. I took a stroll around the town tracked too and fro by the worthy representative of your morning contemporary. There is reported to be about 40 men at work for the Wellington colliery, and those men did not come home during the time of the procession's parade, at least not on the route taken by the association men. The procession numbered about 200 to 250 of the locked out men.

I warned you of the fact of all being quiet and orderly at Wellington. I used by mistake the words non union for union.

What is surprising is that the imaginative reporter of the Colonist says he has been in Wellington since Sunday, and he does not consider it necessary at all to send the troops there. This district certainly will repudiate any hand in the folly.

Why was it not deemed necessary to send the militia to Nanaimo when the V. C. Company had their big strike here, and during which strike the large machine shops of the V. C. Co., with warehouses, etc., were burned to the ground and destroyed? Then no one asked for militia. Why now?

The indignation expressed in the town and district at such drastic measures so prematurely adopted will soon take expression in such a manner as will place the blame upon the shoulders that should bear such a stigma as has now been unnecessarily placed upon Nanaimo district. Can it possibly be retaliation for election results?

The M. & M. L. P. A. officers knew of the troops coming early in the day. So much for the supposed secrecy observed in the telegraph office at Victoria.

Mr. Langley, of the Provincial Police force, came up on the noon train in citizen's clothes and retained the same until the troops arrived. He then mustered up sufficient courage to appear in uniform for the rest of the evening.

ALL PEACEFUL.

At the Seat of War—A Denial—Good Advice Given.

Special to the TIMES.]

WELLINGTON, Aug. 7, 2 p. m.—All quiet yet. A procession is forming in the village. The TIMES arriving by the noon train was eagerly read and all the report pronounced correct barring the incident describing A. Dunsmuir asking Col. Holmes to disperse the procession on Tuesday. Col. Holmes wishes emphatically to deny the same as does Mr. Dunsmuir. The latter says he has better sense than to take to himself the duties of a magistrate. Your correspondent got the information from a presumably reliable source, however.

2:30 p. m.—Just now the procession is now being addressed by G. W. Rasure, [illegible] the evangelist. The speaker is giving good advice to the men and says don't by any action disgrace manhood or do anything contrary to law, it is by your past law-abiding actions that the sympathy of the public has been enlisted. Act manlike and no bad result will follow. Questions of difficulty which requires study but no harsh measures will do good. The miners are listening intently and preserving good order. The officers of the association are keeping the road clear for vehicles passing.

A MINER'S LETTER.

Asks Why Troops are Sent When Constables are not Required.

TO THE EDITOR:—Yesterday morning our union men gathered together to escort those gentlemen who chose to work here, whilst the others whose just demands have been refused, are rendered homeless and lay idly around.

The union men met, formed in parade, and marched along the road singing national songs. In the meantime those workmen who intended to work left their homes, and the men of the union marched to escort, when some one spread a report they had taken a by-road through the bush. Of course the men on parade, not to be outwitted rushed across the open ground intervening shouting and cheering, hissing and laughing unitedly, and one of the union processionists did shout something about "Blacklegs." When this fact was known to the officers of the union in charge, strict and positive orders were issued, that any member repeating such acts would be punished by dismissal. The afternoon march was quite orderly; nothing violent towards person or property has yet been attempted nor will such a thing happen, unless some rash, wild, impetuous representative of the collieries is foolish enough to first break the peace. No one can accuse the union men of any act of violence to either person or property, and yet the report is well circulated here, this noon time, that at 2:30 p. m. troops are to arrive here and quell the riot. Surely we are not to have another indulgence of Government folly? If so, then it is true that others than children are foolish enough to burn their fingers more than once; but it cannot possibly be true, as there is no clause of British law that would warrant sending troops to a village of two thousand inhabitants with five special constables in it, and not one of those specials have had occasion to attempt to arrest any citizen of the village, either for injury to property or person, or an attempt to commit such. If such is true about troops coming! My God!! Why are they coming? Yours, SAFETY LAMP.

Wellington, August 5.

VICTORIA AS A MANUFACTURING CENTER.

TO THE EDITOR:—The practical man often says to himself, "should not our central position give us an unquestionable adaptability as a manufacturing center." Our salubrious climate, our snow-capped mountains deep gorges and delectable watersheds adorn, beautify and enhance our prospects as a desirable place to live in, but we need something more practical to enable people to live, something that would give them steady employment. The greater portion of the buildings going up in Victoria are residences. That is right. And yet it seems to me that if more manufacturing could be done here, it would be a more substantial earnest of our prosperity. Within easy distance of Victoria there is almost everything in the form of raw material that is required to manufacture staple articles. Timber, coal, iron, tanbark, etc., are in abundance. Our water communication renders our position of great advantage to those who wish to do an export trade with the outside world. The population in this province is yet scarse, but it is steadily increasing. There can be no doubt with respect to the commercial future of this Province. The almost unlimited latent resources of this country will when thoroughly developed give to us a natural prosperity that warrants people to engage in manufacturing in time to catch the flood-tide of fortune. Among the many articles that could be manufactured here is leather. We have the raw material here in abundance, hides and tan-bark. As the country grows and population increases there will come a greater demand for all kinds of leather. Considering the present state of the leather markets, the price of hides and the facilities for procuring bark, there ought to be a hopeful future for a large tannery conducted upon scientific and business principles. The object in writing is to call attention to the urgent necessity of encouraging the manufacturing of those staple articles that can be produced here as cheaply as anywhere else, from the fact that we have an abundance of raw material. People come here and admire our city, and express themselves willing to settle here, but find it difficult to gain a footing on account of there being no great amount of manufacturing, and consequently a scarcity of those means that give permanent employment. Between the cities of this country there is going to be a keen contest as to which shall be the most important manufacturing center. "Time and tide wait for no man." Victoria should be on the alert. It sometimes happens that [illegible] are passed. If we allow other cities to take the lead in starting factories we shall wake up after a time to the fact that we are left far behind as a mercantile city. This subject should be thoroughly discussed by the papers, and all who are deeply interested in the future of our city. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space in your paper, I remain, yours etc., ENTERPRISE.

P. S.—I understand that there is a company about to start a tannery. If so, people who are interested in the welfare of Victoria ought to give it their substantial support. E.

A New Agent.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 6.—Mr. Stout, general manager of the Dominion Express Company, arrived here this morning on his annual tour of inspection. He is accompanied by his brother John Stout, who has been appointed agent at Victoria, B.C. Mr. Purdon, assistant to General Superintendent Whyte, has been appointed chief train despatcher at this place.

The Acting Secretary of the Navy has sent a communication to the commandant of the New York navy yard stating that the department has fixed the 23rd of August as the time for the embarkation of the remains of the late John Ericsson for transportation to his native country on board the United States steamer Baltimore. In his letter the Acting Secretary says: "It is the department's desire to surround the embarkation with every circumstance that can invest it with dignity and solemnity. All the vessels of war that may be available will be assembled in New York and will be directed to unite with you in paying to the deceased the honors befitting his rank and distinguished name. The department has invited all associations composed of friends, companions or former countrymen of Captain Ericsson to take part in the procession to the Battery."

AMERICAN ORIMION.

The San Francisco Call on the Behring Sea Question.

The voluminous correspondence between Mr. Blaine and the British Government on the Behring Sea question contains two points which appear to be new. One is the practical admission by Mr. Blaine that he is content to rest his case on the non-user by England of any rights which under the strict rules of international law she might at one time have claimed in Behring Sea. This is a very solid and strong one. The rule of law is that rights may be lost by non-use forms part of international as well as municipal law. There is force in the Secretary's request that he be shown how, when and where Great Britain acquired rights in Behring Sea which she had never claimed from the first discovery of the sea up to the year 1886. If Lord Salisbury cannot show that those rights have always been claimed by Great Britain, though it was inconvenient to use them, he cannot win his case by the mere demonstration that Behring Sea is not and never was a closed sea in the meaning of international law.

The other point is the intervention of Canada in the case. It is evident that, at one time, the British Government was prepared to conclude a temporary arrangement forbidding "pelagic" sealing within ten miles of the fur sealing islands; and as this would have accomplished all the practical objects which this country had in view, without involving any statements of doctrine, the United States would have been satisfied with it. But when the modus vivendi became known at Ottawa, it roused a storm of protest, because it was surrendering the Canadian case. What the skip-owners of Victoria want is the right to sail into Behring sea and to catch seals wherever they find them. They protested that the prohibition of pelagic sealing took away the right altogether.

Now as to England, her position on the matter was different. No mariner from the British Isles wanted to go into Behring Sea after seals. The British people, if they had any opinions or wishes on the subject, were simply opposed to any policy which threatened to involve the extinction of the fur seal. Thus, if the only two parties to the controversy had been Great Britain and the United States it would have been easy to find a ground on which both might have stood without raising the question of the legal quality of Behring Sea. It was the pretension of the British Columbia fishermen that defeated the pending negotiation. On the strength of the declaration of some modern writers on international law that there are no closed seas nowadays the colonists insisted on Great Britain taking the ground that Behring is an open sea, and the Marquis of Salisbury did not dare to say them nay.

It is evident to the careful reader of this correspondence that more than once the writers approached perilously near the line of quarrel. And it is not evident from anything thus far disclosed whether or not there is a prospect of captures of British sealers by United States revenue cutters this summer. It looks as though the Victorian schooners had gone in to the sea to catch seals as usual, and as if, under the President's proclamation, the instructions given to the revenue cutters must have been much like those of last year and the year before. If so, we are unpleasantly in danger of receiving news any day which may strain our relations with a friendly power; and this, merely in order that a few colonial fishermen shall realize a few thousand dollars by taking seal skins without obvious warrant of law.

CANADIAN NEWS.

Items of Interest Received by Telegraph from Different Points.

The Badger Company of Port Arthur shipped to-day to Newark, N. J., a car of silver ore containing 33,550 pounds, and valued at $45,000. This is the richest car ever shipped from Port Arthur, and is the product of Badger's new vein for less than one month's work.

A girl named Wearton, while on her way home to Joggins, N. B., yesterday, put a lighted pipe, which she had been smoking, in her pocket, and set her clothes on fire. Becoming frightened she started to run and was soon enveloped in flames. She ran half a mile before dropping to earth so badly burned that she lived but a few minutes.

Wm. Yale, aged 22, was drowned while bathing in the Don River near Todmorden, and a telegram received here to-day says that Vivian Platt, aged 11, of Toronto, has been drowned in Muskoka, near Port Carling.

The General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada opens in Montreal September 10. The conference was held last year at Sherbrooke, and was remarkably successful. It is expected that British Columbia will be well represented.

Contractor Randolph Macdonald has brought suit against Toronto city, claiming nearly a quarter of a million dollars damages in connection with the Don River improvement works.

The anniversary of the birthday of O'Connell, the Irish patriot, was celebrated in Toronto yesterday with a procession and games. A good deal of party feeling was exhibited on the streets in the evening but no serious fights occurred.

The Provincial elections in Dorchester, Bellechasse and Kamouraska, as well as the return of Desjardins to the Dominion House for Montmorency, will all be contested.

Keith's general store, and Westland & Nicol's private bank at Comber, Ont., was destroyed by fire yesterday. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

A runaway occurred at Regina yesterday morning, and Captain Barnes, of the mounted police had his left broken, Colonel Spencer, both shoulders broken, and the driver, named Leduc, sustained severe concussion of the brain.

The Manufacturers of Winnipeg are making strong efforts to induce Ed. Quigley, the popular lacrosse player, to postpone his intended departure for Vancouver.

A drunken man named Guerin entered Coroner Jones' house at Montreal last night and attacked the wife of Constable Mother. She was prematurely confined, resulting from fright, and today both she and her child are dead. Guerin has been arrested.

Bark Isabel, [illegible] Bay, [illegible] from the west and north side of every building in the village and for miles on either side in the country are broken. The storm was about 40 miles wide and 10 long. All the uncut grain in its path is a total loss. The loss is from $75,000 to $150,000. Hogs were killed and hundreds of chickens perished. In some instances pieces of ice were driven with such force as to pierce through the roofs of buildings.

WINONA, Minn., Aug. 4.—A heavy wind storm struck this city yesterday accompanied by rain. Shade trees, awnings and signs were blown down. The iron roof of the Parker flouring mill was torn out, and considerable other damage was done.

AN ABANDONED CHILD.

Little Fred Fuller Sent Away to Conceal a Crime.

The mystery surrounding the identity of the little waif found in Logan square, Philadelphia, a few weeks ago and who [illegible] Lord Fauntleroy as to excite popular sympathy in his behalf, was unravelled yesterday by the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty.

The society sent information about the abandonment broadcast over this country and England, and a few days ago word was received from an English society engaged in similar work that a boy, now five years old, and answering the description of the little waif had been given into the care of a Mrs. Jane Anguish about a year ago. Agents Watson and Ward, of this society, traced the family to this city, where they are located in a neat two-storey house at No. 636 Owen street. A warrant was sworn out before Magistrate Kane, charging Mrs. Anguish with abandoning the child, and the party proceeded to Owen street. Mrs. Puncheon, matron of the Children's Society, accompanied the officers with the child, and remained outside while the officers entered the house and accused Mrs. Anguish of the crime. The woman was so astonished she could not deny the accusation, and then Mrs. Puncheon and the boy were called in. When the child saw Mrs. Anguish he ran to her in great glee calling out:

"Oh, mamma, mamma, this is my mamma!" Denial was no longer possible, and the woman on being taken before Magistrate Kane said that his name is Fred. Fuller, and that his father is a man of wealth in England, while his mother is a woman of refinement and intelligence. The woman said she was paid to bring the child to this country with her about a year ago. She abandoned the waif because she had three children of her own, and her husband, Charles Anguish, has not been able to make much money at his trade as a shoe cutter.

Mrs. Anguish was held in $600 for a further hearing.

She gave the name and address of the little lord's father in England and the society will communicate with him. The boy remains in the care of Mrs. Puncheon. He is a pretty little chap and has excited great interest. He is very correct in expressing himself, manly and polite. His quaint expressions and pert sayings have created much amusement for the dozen or more charitably disposed ladies who were eager to adopt him.

AS A POSTMISTRESS.

Mrs. Cleveland Behind the Wicket—The Latest Bazaar Pad.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The Sun's Marion, Mass., special says: Mrs. Cleveland was the centre of attraction today at the Marigold Fair, which is Marion's annual festival, and it was through her efforts that the largest share of the day's receipts were received. Mrs. Cleveland acted as postmistress, the office being located on the front verandah of Judge Austin's handsome residence, and the place was decorated with American flags. There was a steady stream of callers at the office window, and each was greeted with a pleasant smile, as each caller presented his or her name and deposited sufficient currency to pay the postage on a letter, which was handed out. The office was in every sense a typical one. Outside were lists of advertised letters and letters held for postage. Some of the latter were sadly in debt to the fair postmistress, and when the owner appeared at the delivery window they were obliged to settle in full before they received their letters. Mrs. Cleveland had two very efficient assistants, who handled the mail as easily as if they had always been in the employ of Uncle Sam. While the post-office was crowded the other features of the festival were well patronized. At the Dime Museum tent, two improvised freaks, a fat lady and a dog-faced boy, had a host of admirers. A pair of donkeys, owned by R. W. Gilder, the Century publisher, were also a source of revenue, when not too obstinate, as was quite often the case. A sum of $1200 was realized. Ex-President Cleveland did not put in an appearance at the festival until late in the day, as he was enjoying fishing in Buzzard's bay, in company with Col. Dan Lamont, who arrived yesterday.

A SUNDAY HAIL STORM.

Another Great Storm Does Serious Injury in the Northwest.

SIOUX FALLS, S.D., Aug. 4.—A severe hailstorm visited this city yesterday. It lasted about five minutes, but did $10,000 to $15,000 damage to the city in the way of [illegible] windows and injury to trees and shrubbery. The new court house suffered the greatest damage, over 100 panes of glass being broken. In the north and central portions of the city hailstones ranged up to the size of a man's fist, while in the southern portion they were not larger than an inch in diameter. Reports from the outside show the track of the storm to have been about forty miles wide, from Beaver creek to Salem. The damage to small grain will be comparatively slight, as that of it was in the shock, but corn was stripped of leaves.

NEW RICHMOND, Minn., Aug. 4.—A most terrible wind and hail storm visited this section yesterday. The windows

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The City Fathers Dispose of a Lot of Business in Short Order.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held last evening at the city hall. His Worship the Mayor in the chair, and Aldermen Beckwith, Vigelius, Harrison, Kelly, Holland, McKillican and Robertson present. The minutes of the last meeting having been read, the following were read:

From the Supreme Court, re Carey vs. the Corporation in the matter of the Colquitz river.—On motion Hon. R. Beaven was asked to act as arbitrator for the city in the case.

An invitation to the city aldermen from the B. C. Fruit Growers' Association was received and accepted with thanks.

From E. W. Allenstein, asking for permission to use a portion of Green street for building purposes.

From the James Bay Athletic Association, calling attention to the fact that A. B. Gray had been granted an injunction preventing them from erecting building.

From A. B. Gray, also referring to the matter.

Ald. Robertson said that he thought the council had nothing to do with the matter.

Ald. McKillican said that he did not know that the association were going build a building two stories high when the first communication was read, or he would have opposed it.

The matter was referred to the street committee and the city barristers.

From H. G. Hall, requesting the council to pay the award given to Jones & McNeil by the arbitrators appointed.—The letter was received and filed.

From J. Griffith, asking for permission to use part of First street.—Granted subject to usual conditions.

From T. B. Whitney, stating that the National Electric Tramway company intended shortly to lay double tracks on Cadboro Bay road and also on Birdcage walk.—Referred to street committee and commissioner.

From the Attorney-General, calling the attention of the council to the Victoria Athletic club, and saying that if the council had sanctioned the erection of the building, that they see that the building is removed and that the club be compensated.

Ald. Harrison said he thought the latter went a little too far. The Provincial Government were not running the council.—Referred to the street committee.

From E. Mohun, acknowleding receipt of information that his sewerage plan had been accepted.—Received and filed.

From C. W. R. Thompson, asking for street lines on Government street.—Request granted.

From B. W. Pearse in regard to the street lines on Cadboro Bay road and the width of the street.—Referred to street committee.

ACCOUNTS.

The monthly accounts amounting to $5,309.75 were referred to the finance committee for payment if found correct.

BY-LAWS.

The $360,000 by-law for sewerage purpose was read a first time.s

The by-law authorizing the sale of James Bay flat was also read a first time.

The by-law authorizing the council to appoint three park commissioners was read a first time.

PETITIONS.

From the residents of Cobourg street, asking for sidewalks and drains on that street.—Referred to street committee.

REPORTS.

The report of the street committee, advising that the work of blasting on Pandora street be stopped, was adopted.

The following report was received from the sewerage committee:

Victoria, B. C., August 5th, 1890.

To His Worship the Mayor and Board of Aldermen:

Gentlemen:—Mr. Keene's communication on sewerage matters having been referred to the sewerage committee for report, we the undersigned respectfully submit the following for your consideration.

1. That plan No. 2 is the only one that provides for the whole of the discharge of sewerage into the straits.

2. Mr. Keen is in error when he states that his plan was given first place by the sewerage committee, he is also in error when he states that no sewerage is provided in No. 2 for public schools, First, Second, Third, and Fourth streets Work Estate, the latter streets being sewered down the 20 feet alleys, lying between First and Second, between Second and Third, and also between Third and Fourth streets, thus giving good drainage to Hillside Avenue and all the four other streets named.

3. Mr. Keen is evidently not acquainted with the mode in which the Shone ejectors work, or he would not so strongly state that any smell arises from them, since the raised sewerage is hermetically sealed, and does not again come in contact with the atmosphere until it reaches the end of the sewer at Clover Point.

In conclusion, the sewerage committee having come to the conclusion to be guided by the opinion of Mr. Hering, whom they employed as an expert in such matters, have of course no alternative but to adopt the plan recommended by him, especially as said system costs in Mr. Hering's estimate $150,000 less than what Mr. Keen estimates his own system. Very respectfully,

J. B. Harrison,
M. McKillican,
J. Holland,
L. Goodacre,
S. L. Kelley.

Adopted.

The market committee asked to be given further time, as they had sent away for information.—Adopted.

Ald. Holland moved that the Hon. A. N. Richards, Q. C., P. M., be asked to give his opinion as to the shooting of the Indian Charley by Jailer Allen, to the police committee.

His Worship said he thought it was not fair to ask the magistrate to give an opinion, as the case would very likely come up before the police magistrate.

Ald. Harrison said he did not think that Officer Allen was in fault, as it was a particular case. What is the use of giving the policemen pistols if they cannot use them?

Ald. Holland said the opinion of the police committee was that Officer Allen should be promoted instead of being suspended, as he had done the best thing he could have done.

It was moved and seconded that Constable Allen be reinstated.

The meeting adjourned at 9:30, the council to meet again on Saturday evening to consider different by-laws and other business.

AROUND THE COURTS.

A Busy Day in the Justice Mills and Among the Lawyers.

The case of the young druggist against a prominent saloon keeper, which was to have come up in the Supreme Court yesterday, did not do so, as the prosecutor did not appear. His crooked dealings with the customs authorities has evidently scared him out of British territory.

The long-pending case of Harper vs. Harper will come up in the Supreme Court to-morrow.

In the Divisional Court, yesterday, Justices McCreight and Walkem dismissed the appeal of the C. P. R. Co. from an order made by the Chief Justice dismissing the application of the C. P. R. Company to restrain Messrs. Sinclair and Tappan, the plaintiffs, from signing judgment or taking any further proceedings under the award made by the arbitrators, Pooley, Q. C., and Helmcken for C. P. R.; Davie, Q. C., and Bodwell for Sinclair and Tappan.

Justices McCreight and Walkem, sitting in the Divisional Court to-day, were occupied in hearing an appeal from the order of the Chief Justice striking out certain paragraphs of the defendant's statement of defence in the case of Strouss et al. vs. Catharine Holtz. Coilson and Helmcken for appellants, and Yates and Joy for the respondents.

Paul LeClaire, who was sent up for trial for robbing one Wm. McNeil, was sent up for 18 months by Judge Drake in the speedy trials court this morning. He pleaded guilty to the charge and got off a good deal easier than if he had pleaded otherwise.

The Chief Justice disposed of a number of minor cases in the county court to-day.

For the South.

The steamer City of Puebla sailed for San Francisco this morning with the following passengers from this city: J. W. Powers, A. J. Betches, wife and family, H. L. Snowden, T. Duffie, Miss B. Best, Miss Duffie, Geo. E. Bertreaux, Mrs. Hardie, and Mrs. M. A. Hargreaves.

Alaskan Summer Route

Is becoming a very fashionable one tourists, and at present on our thoroughfares are noticeable in large numbers those waiting for the Queen going north. Not less observable is it to passers by the quantity of furniture and carpets that daily leaves the store of Hastie & Erskine, 92 Government street which is altogether owing to the fashionable stock carried and good value given by them.

Disabled.

Word was received in the city this morning that the little steamer Rustler was disabled in Cadbora Bay. From what can be heard it seems that the steamer was rounding the mile point when some part of her engine broke and the steamer was forced to go into Cadboro Bay for shelter. She had two scow loads of lumber in tow and it is thought that she managed to hold on to them. The Badger went out this morning to render her what assistance she can.

Race for Liberty.

Yesterday afternoon as a gentleman from Saanich was hitching up a team of fine looking horses in front of Ewing's stables on Johnson street the animals suddenly became affrighted at something and bolted down Johnson and along Douglas streets. The horses were going along Douglas at a rapid rate with the tongue of the wagon hanging to them and which eventually stopped their mad race by becoming entangled with the sidewalk. One of the horses were thrown back under the wagon and badly hurt, so bad that he will have to be doctored for some time before being of any use.

A Mean Thief.

A few days ago a man came to Fred Smith, an employee of Walter Walker, the coal merchant, and asked if Smith could not help him, as he was out of work. Smith kindly allowed the man to share his cabin on Rathay's wharf and also allowed him to eat with him which the man seemed very glad to do. But when Smith went home at 8 o'clock last evening he found that he had been harboring a rogue as the individual had nailed down the windows, locked the doors and left the cabin with everything he could lay his hands on. A splendid suit, and other clothing was taken, and Smith, who had only been working a few days, loses almost all he had in the world. This is without doubt the meanest thing that has been brought to the notice of the citizens of this city for a long time and almost any punishment would be too good for the man that would do such a thing.

Richard Davey's Play "Inherited."

Mr. Richard Daveys play "Inherited" of which so much has been said, will be presented Monday night at the Victoria Theatre upon the occasion of Miss Maude Granger's opening engagement. Mr. Davey is one of the popular litterateurs and journalists of London and the initial production of his play which was in Paris under the title of "L'Heritage d' Helene" was a notable success. It is the first instance of a play written by an English author being successfully produced in Paris, after having been translated into the French language. The Parisian production was under the auspices of the company attached to the famous conservatory and was a particularly brilliant event among the English and American residents of the French capital. The sale of seats for Miss Granger's engagement is now open at Waitt's book store. "Inherited" will be presented next Monday and "The Creole" Tuesday.

DOES IT PAY TO ADVERTISE?

Well, That Depends.

It has paid us. On Saturday, the 5th instant, we advertised 20 per cent. off all Clothing. We have been rushing ever since, although some of our customers had to climb over a pile of rubbish about as high as a six-rail fence. If the streets were all full of rubbish it would be better for the town. It's a sign of progress.

OUR SALE STILL CONTINUES. We are bound to clean out our summer stocks. Better lose our profit than carry them over. We have piles of BOYS' SUITS left. We are not selling as many as we expected. Probably on account of the difficulty in getting to our store.

THE HEATHORN TANNERIES.

Purchased To-Day by Messrs. Norris and Flummerfelt.

The purchase of the entire plant of the Bay Tannery, and all of the machinery of the Rock Bay Tannery, was effected this morning by Messrs. Norris and Flummerfelt, from Mrs. W. Heathorn. The price paid was in the neighborhood of $8000.

The new owners will transfer the machinery from the new premises, and immediately begin operations on an extensive scale.

Since the death of Mr. Heathorn, last January, there has been no new work undertaken at the tanneries, the hides then in process being finished about the first of July, since which time they have been closed down. A tannery is a paramount necessity here, all the leather used at present being imported. Thousands of hides are shipped to 'Frisco which should be handled here, giving employment to a large number of men, and saving freights to consumers. Messrs. Norris and Flummerfelt can probably use all of the leather they will manufacture for some time to come, and are to be congratulated on securing so valuable a property which was in reality a necessity to them.

Mr. J. Montague Lecte will deliver an address at Philharmonic Hall on Friday, the 22nd instant, on the social business, professional and political life of the city of Victoria, as effecting immigration to it. Chair taken at 8 o'clock. aug 6 4t

There would seem to be room for an official whose duty it would be to look after the enforcement of the law for the prevention of cruelty to animals, for there is undoubtedly more brutality used by some persons than is necessary. Last evening for instance, a hack driver might have been seen, lashing a poor jaded team of horses in the endeavor to make them gallop to the steamboat landing. The swish swish of his sharp-edged whip could be heard along Government street and on to the wharf.

The following item from the Free Press will show how the people of Nanaimo feel over the sending of troops to Wellington: "The movements of the C Battery have been kept very secret and the Free Press is at a loss to know what truthful representations could be made for the dispatch of C Battery to Wellington. The orders of the court have been peacefully obeyed, and no overt act has been attempted. While all must feel deeply this second insult to this district, still the Free Press again urges that the people of Wellington and surrounding districts act with dignity and coolness, and let steps be taken to ascertain who is responsible for this unasked for dispatch of troops to Wellington. It is not the soldiers who are to blame, they are under orders and are but doing their duty, but those who have been the cause of sending them here. Let peaceful actions on the part of the miners show to the world at large that they were not needed."

Don't read! Don't think! Don't believe! Now, are you better? You women who think that patent medicines are a humbug, and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the biggest humbug of the whole (because it is best known of all)—does your lack-of-faith cure come?

It is very easy to "don't" in this world. Suspicion always comes more easily than confidence. But doubt—little faith—never made a sick woman well—and the "Favorite Prescription" has cured thousands of delicate, weak women which makes us think that our "Prescription" is better than your "don't believe." We're both honest. Let us come together. You try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. If it does not do as represented, you get your money again.

While you wait for the car. It is far too warm and dusty to stand on the corner, and you are very welcome to a seat in Cochrane & Munn's drug store, corner Yates and Douglas streets. Their store is cool and free from dust, and you will find it much more pleasant waiting here, than outside, in the dust and heat.

I. O. G. T.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Victoria West Lodge, I. O. G. T., held last evening, the following officers were installed by Brother Plummer: C. T., Bro. W. D. Stanley; P. C. T., Bro. A. Semple; P. T., Sis. J. Campbell; Chaplain, Bro. Virtue; S. of J. T., Sister J. Semple; Secretary, Bro. Clark; Marshall, Bro. Lindley; Deputy Marshall, Sister M. Clark; Guard, Sister Gibson; Sentinel, Bro. Lyson. Three new members were also initiated last evening, making a total of 86.

Needs Repairing.

The attention of the street committee has been before called to the disgraceful condition of Johnson street between Douglas and Blanchard, where a large amount of Macadam and boulder are being dumped, leaving the street almost impassable. The road has been built fully two feet higher than formerly on either side but in the middle a narrow roadway with only room enough for one team is left untouched. It is true a man is kept working there but the time already spent on that street could have been used in fixing a dozen streets. A stranger not knowing the street might drive down it at dark and more than likely his carriage would be overturned and a serious accident result which the city would of course have to pay for.

Five Abreast.

The Esquimalt bus was waiting at the post office; a carriage with tourists going north was just abreast of it, while in the centre of the street stood a cab "on the stand," next to the cab "on the stand" a tramway car was passing south, and between the tramway and the sidewalk an express wagon was carefully navigating its way towards Yates street. All the five vehicles were in a row across Government street at the same instant. A lady was passing from the east to the west side on the crossing opposite the post office door, and having reached the center of the roadway made several attempts to reach the pavement, the carriages each time impeding her progress and compelling her to remain in the only safe place, the center of the line of cabs "on the stand." Finally when the tramcar had moved on, and the express wagon had passed around the corner, and the two moving cabs had left that portion of the street in undisputed possession of the cabs "on the stand" the timid and pedestrian was able to reach a place of safety, and drivers in general resumed their normal condition. There was no person hurt, and now that the story is finished the moral which somewhere lies hidden away in the incident cannot be laid hands on. Perhaps the smiling jehu, who from his perch on his cab "on the stand" witnessed the five vehicles abreast at the same time, will be able to point it out to the chairman of the street committee.
